

Teach English in Japan

Why teach English with AEON?

Are you ready for a rewarding work experience in a positive and professional setting?

Are you interested in helping Japanese students improve their English?

AEON Corporation has been providing high-quality English education to students in Japan since 1973. We have over 250 schools, located all throughout Japan, and offer English lessons to students ranging from babies to business people, college students to retirees.

We also provide great benefits to our employees, including:

- Monthly starting salary of 275,000 yen; salary increases upon contract renewal
- Furnished, single occupancy apartment provided; rent subsidized over 55,000 yen
- One-time 70,000 yen flight allowance
- Health Insurance provided to all teachers
- Three fully paid one-week vacations and 5 paid personal days per year
- Teaching and international business experience
- Advancement opportunities for successful, dedicated teachers
- Contract completion bonus
- and more!

Life at AEON

Throughout their time at AEON, our teachers gain valuable experience both inside and outside of the classroom.

AEON Corporation has a proven track record of providing high-quality English educational services for students of all ages and our schools strive to maintain a high standard of educational quality and a sound business plan. Our teachers' support and cooperation are essential to our success in both of these areas.

At AEON, teachers take an active role both inside and outside of the classroom to help their students reach their English goals and make their school financially successful.

Teachers have the opportunity to support their students by teaching great lessons using the AEON teaching methods and textbooks, providing educational counselings to make sure that students are satisfied with their progress and coaching students working on Self Study Program materials. Teachers also get to know their students outside of the classroom by doing Lobby Talk between classes.

Teachers support their school by attending weekly business meetings, assisting the staff with advertising by handing out flyers and attracting prospective students by conducting interviews. Teachers will also be heavily involved in recommending appropriate classes and materials to students.

To learn more about the business responsibilities of an AEON teacher, visit:

<http://www.aeonet.com/life-at-aeon/business-responsibilities/>

Getting Started in Japan

Starting from the Airport Pickup and Initial Training and continuing throughout their time at their school, AEON is invested in our teachers' professional success.

AEON has an established system in place to ensure that all teachers receive the support and care necessary for living and working in Japan. This support begins the moment they are hired and continues all throughout their AEON career, enabling our teachers to feel a strong sense of security as they embark on their new life in Japan.

Some of the support that AEON provides includes:

- A valid working visa before a teacher departs for Japan
- Support from AEON recruiters and trainers prior to departure
- Airport Pickup
- Paid Initial Training, Follow-Up Training, and additional training/workshop opportunities throughout a teacher's time at AEON
- Support with setting up a Japanese bank account

To learn more about teacher support and care visit:

<http://www.aeonet.com/life-at-aeon/teacher-support-care/>

Life in Japan

Experience a side of Japan most tourists don't get to see and join a local community.

AEON teachers aren't only teaching Japanese students, they're getting to know their students and local community during their time at their school.

AEON has schools located all throughout Japan, in cities of various sizes and climates. For teachers who are interested in experiencing snow and love winter sports, the Tobu region which includes Hokkaido and Nagano may be a great fit! If you're looking for a big city experience, the Shutoken region includes cities like Tokyo and Yokohama. Teachers who are interested in traveling around Japan should check out the centrally-located Chubu region. The Kansai region is a good area for those who consider themselves foodies. If you're looking for an immersive experience and some amazing natural scenery, the Seibu region would be a good fit. For warm-weather lovers, the Kyushu region is a great area to explore.

While each region has something different to offer, all teachers at AEON get to experience being a part of their local community. Many AEON teachers immerse themselves in the community by taking Japanese lessons (oftentimes offered at local international centers), taking part in local events and festivals and making friends both inside and outside of their schools.

To see more of what Japan has to offer visit:
<http://www.aeonet.com/life-in-japan/>

How to Apply

Are you ready to start teaching English in Japan? Apply now!

If teaching English in Japan with AEON sounds like the experience you're looking for, then head to our site to apply now! AEON hires year-round for positions all throughout Japan. We hold weekly interviews at our Los Angeles and New York Offices and also visit cities throughout the US and abroad. To see which recruiting location and date is most convenient for you, please visit:

<http://www.aeonet.com/recruiting-locations/>

If you would like to see the application requirements or more information about the application and interview process before applying, then please visit:

<http://www.aeonet.com/application-requirements/>

For soon-to-be graduates, we recommend applying no more than 6 months before graduation. For those who have already graduated, we recommend applying 3 to 6 months before your intended departure date.

We look forward to receiving your application!